

Project 1 asks that we create a small website for a cover band, containing at least 4 pages and with content that is “real” and realistic. My website will be for a cover band called “Big Time Hush,” a “Big Time Rush” tribute band. They primarily perform for teens, young adults, and younger millennials who remember watching “Big Time Rush” on Nickelodeon. Performances can be requested on their site via the Contact page. Users of the website will be those looking to hire the cover band to perform at events. The home page will include recent and upcoming events and a “Book Now!” button meant to entice the user to go to the contact page and hire the band for an event.

In terms of usability, I want the site to be extremely easy to navigate. There will be a navigation bar at the top of the page leading to each page of the website: Home, Contact, About, Gallery. The home page will be as described above, including other supporting info to welcome the users to the site. The contact page will contain a form to request information about booking the cover band for an event. The about page will contain bios of each band member, and a description of how the band came to be. The Gallery will contain photos of the band playing concerts and events, as a way to entice users (that could be your event!) The footer of the page will contain basic contact info, such as address, email, and phone number, as well as social media page links.

To be mobile friendly, I would place “Upcoming and Past Events” between the “Welcome” and “Book” blocks, so that there’s nothing squished on the side of the page. I would also create a hamburger menu to replace the site navigation bar.
